1. Let go of the idea that you always have to be perfect. Most people are afraid of public speaking because of the fear of making a mistake in front of everyone. This anxiety makes mistakes even more likely.
2. During the presentation, I try to be as abstract as possible and forget that I am already performing, I try to imagine that I am just rehearsing the performance alone at home.
3. When preparing a presentation, I try to make it informal so that I and the listeners are interested and relaxed

My criticism

This video illustrates all the pros and cons of remote meetings. And we are shown different types of people at online meetings. Some people have problems joining the meeting, some people turn off the sound and get the impression that she is not there, as if others are participating in the conference but doing something of their own. It is also illustrated that two people start talking at the same time, ignoring each other for a while, and how can you not show the echo effect at an online conference.
